I. O. D. E.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent last Friday, by those members of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter, on the Deseronto Road, in response to the invitation of its teacher, Mrs. File. The Union Jack floating over the little school-house waved a gay welcome as they approached, and a number of parents and friends of the pupils were assembled with Mrs. File and the children to greet the guests.

The interior was very prettily and artistically decorated with wreaths of bright hued maple leaves, and many well executed water colors and drawings done by the children, added to the attractiveness of the room.

The Regent, Mrs. Harshaw, opened the meeting by requesting all present to stand and salute the flag; she then expressed her regret that Mrs. M. S. Madole could not be there to act as chairman, for Mr. Madole had attended the Oliver school as a pupil, and he had also been a teacher there. The Regent then called upon Mrs. Finkle to take the chair and she kindly consented to come to the rescue, and presided most efficiently and agreeably over the meeting.

After an explanation of the crosses on the Union Jack and the meaning of its colors during which she asked the children a number of questions, which were answered readily and intelligently, and a few more preliminary remarks by the Regent. Mrs. Milsap was called upon to read the "Raising of the Flag throughout the Empire." As she read two pupils, Marian Rennie and Janet Baughn, in turn pointed out on a map of the world without the slightest hesitancy the different places named at which the British Flag is run up each day at sunrise. Marian Rennie then read very nicely and with much expression "The Private of the Buffs."

The next number on the programme was a chorus by boys and girls led by Mrs. Gile, who sang "Kiplings" beautiful "Recessional" remarkably well. "The Maple Leaf Forever" was then sung by the Daughters of the Empire and the school.

The comrades' correspondence branch of the I. O. D. E. was next explained to the children by the secretary, Mrs. W. G. Wilson and was followed by a reading by Mrs. J. G. Daly entitled "The Centenary of Livingstone Empire Builder."

The Regent presented the school with a framed picture of their majesties, King George and Queen Mary on behalf of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter followed by a reading of an extract from the Empire Movement Pamphlet, and an account of the coming of the U. E. Loyalists into Canada.

Miss Heck read a poem called "If" by Rudyard Kipling, the famous Imperialist and brought out its fullest meaning by her sympathetic interpretation.

Mrs. File closed the programme with an interesting and delightful little speech and all joined in singing the National Anthem.

The school possesses a cabinet containing many interesting and natural specimens and curiosities collected by the children which shows that their learning is not altogether confined to text books but that mother-

"THE SIEGE OF THE SEVEN SUITORS."

A Whimsical Story of Love and Mystery.

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Did you ever read a story in which humor of the finest and most delicious sort played the leading part? Did you ever tackle a tale which made you gasp by the originality of its ideas? Did you ever meet some utterly impossible persons who never lived or never could have lived and whom you might meet any day of your life? They're here—right in this story. They have the most impossible adventures and get into the most impossible situations, just as you or I might any day if the stage were set just right for us. Furthermore, they are very entertaining people, and they hold the interest from the first word to finish. Don't miss the first installment.

The meanest man on record is said to be a farmer who lives in York. He sold his son-in-law one half a cow and then refused to divide the milk, maintaining that he had only sold the front half. The buyer was also required to provide the food the cow consumed and compelled to carry water to her three times a day. Recently the cow hooked the old man and now he is suing the son-in-law for damages.

Harry Bedell, young son of Mr. Henry Bedell, who resides in Belleville, was the victim of a painful and unfortunate accident on Saturday afternoon in Thurlow. He was engaged in cutting corn in a chopper at the farm of Mr. Johns when his left hand became caught in the mechanism. The four fingers were so cut and lacerated that Dr. Gibson had to amputate and dress them at the Belleville hospital to which the victim was taken for treatment.

Thanks-giving Day

The days are gray and chill and cold.
The wind goes whistling shrill.
The slight snow in the hollows hold.
The rabbits footprints still.
Above the boughs are brown and bare
Below the flowers are dead.
The songsters of the summer fair
To summer skies have fled.

But yet November, month of storm.
You have one golden day
That cheers the heart, and keeps it warm.
Although your skies are gray.
The Harvest Home of all the year
When all the barns are stored,
In earths increase doth still appear
The bounty of the Lord.

Then those we love we meet again,
They come from far and near.
For others, too, we look in vain.
They do not greet us here
Yet while for these all eyes are dim
All heads bow silent low.
Thanks-giving full, complete, to him
From whom all blessings flow"

LOCAL OPTION.

Napanee to Have a Campaign This Fall

It looks fairly certain that there will be a Local Option contest in Napanee this coming January and a few suggestions may not be amiss. In some places where Local Option contests have taken place there has been left behind a feeling of enmity between different classes which may take years to overcome. Napanee does not want, and cannot afford to have enmity for years between different classes of the community, and there is no reason why such a feeling should not be avoided. The contest should be conducted by recognizing every man's right to form his own conclusions, and vote as he thinks best, and each party should be at perfect liberty to use all the arguments they can command to influence the voters without going into any personal affairs. There are many divergent views upon local option question. Some citizens holding that it will ruin the town, while others may point out many advantages to accrue. We do not propose to discuss the matter, though it is a poor question that will not stand discussion. The whole campaign should be conducted by both parties with the utmost respect for opinion of others, and Napanee may escape some of the bitter results which have followed campaigns in other towns. Intolerance by either side will be com-

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

Carmania with only three oars intact. After this miraculous escape Capt. Barr did not again attempt to launch a single boat. Hence, our ship saved only one passenger, who swam to her.

"Shortly after we arrived the Carmania tried both fore and aft oil sprays, but without effect on the mountainous waves. Then the captain sent out wireless calls in all directions for an oil ship, and his efforts were rewarded by an answer from the Narragansett. The Grosse Kurfurst and other liners got in as close as possible and lowered lifeboats. They took aboard several persons who had jumped from the Volturino, and the work was greatly facilitated by the steam pinnace of the Grosse Kurfurst, which had stayed out all night. At once the Narragansett began to spray oil about the doomed ship, and the waves subsided as by magic. Soon the small boats were enabled to run alongside the liner and take the clinging people from the ladders. The rescue work was over in a very short time. Eleven liners formed the boundary around the film of oil, and the survivors were hoisted aboard the various steamers without trouble."

Bomb Explosion In New York.
NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Despite the recent round-up of Italians suspected of being responsible for most of the bomb outrages committed in New York, the East Side was disturbed yesterday by one of the most terrific explosions in years. Economy.
Economy is the science of buying a two dollar hat for $3.75 when a good one may be had for $4. It is a harmless and fascinating pursuit for those who can afford it, but a poor man has no business to fritter away his time and substance on such extravagances. Women are particularly addicted to it and often become so skillful that they are able to get through January without encroaching on their April allowance. Men who have such wives are naturally very proud of them and are willing to redouble their efforts, if necessary in order to provide them with the means to develop the habit.

Zella Emerson of Jackson, Mich., whose imprisonment caused such a furor several months ago, was one of those injured. Mrs. Lee, who presided at the meeting and took a conspicuous part in the attack on the police, was arrested.

Miss Pankhurst later announced her intention to address a meeting at the Poplar town hall to-night.

To Interrupt: Royal Wedding.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—"Every effort will be made to call attention of the notables at the royal wedding on Wednesday, to tortures which the women of England has suffered for the enfranchisement of their sex."

In these words the militant suffragettes at a meeting last night promised to take advantage of the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife "for the good of the cause."

Miss Annie Kenney, one of the noted leaders of the militants, who has been on hunger strike since her arrest on Oct. 6, was released last night after threats had been made at a meeting of the militants in the afternoon that if she was not freed, the militants would bombard the Home Office and camp on the Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna's front steps until they could find some way of getting at him.

TWO ARE DROWNED.

Fire Rangers Upset In Rapids, Try To Swim Ashore.

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—The waters of the Nipigon River, in northern Ontario, claimed the lives of two members of the provincial fire ranging force on Saturday afternoon last, details of the tragedy reaching the Department of Lands and Mines yesterday. Walter Scott Burns, a young man from Toronto, and Deputy Chief J. D. Copley were the victims, and although strenuous efforts have been exercised the bodies have not yet been recovered. A large staff of men is now employed under the direction of Chief Bliss, dragging the river.

According to the tale received at the Department, the tragedy occurred while a party of rangers who had completed some telephone work up the river were en route to camp. Their canoe upset in the rapids and Copley and Burns instead of clinging to the craft tried to swim ashore.

Hearing Is Postponed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 14.—The hearing of Harry W. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, before U. S. Commissioner Young was postponed yesterday until Nov. 5. His bond of $10,000 was continued. The charge against Jones is conspiracy to transport explosives illegally.

Jones was taken into custody here following the arrest and confession of George Davis, alias George O'Donnell, an iron worker, in New York. Davis was brought to this city, and it is expected will repeat his confession before the United States grand jury, which convenes here Nov. 11.

CURIOUS DUELS.

Combats In Which the Weapons Selected Were Avalanches.

An extraordinary duel was fought near Mont Blanc in France. Two young men who had fallen in love with the same girl arranged to fight a duel, with nature as decider of the result.

Selecting a part of that mountainous district, many thousand feet up, where avalanches are known to fall at frequent intervals, the lovers agreed to take it in turns to stand for a given time in the most dangerous spot that could be found. The idea was that when one was killed by an avalanche the other should be free to propose to the girl whom they both loved. In this case the idea became a fact.

This is not the only instance on record of a duel by avalanche. A few years ago two Italians, named Guetta and Sorato, decided to test fate in this manner, and also for the love of a woman.

For three mornings they tempted nature, but nothing serious happened. On the fourth day Guetta was knocked down by a falling avalanche, but not much hurt. Then it was that their food supply gave out, and they returned home to get some more. By this time the police had come to hear of their strange duel, and threatened them both with imprisonment. So the undaunted rivals settled their differences in another and less adventurous way. They drew lots for their lady love. Sorato won, and after Guetta had left the village he was married to the girl of his choice.—London Answers.

STRENGTH OF A LIMPET.

Its Sticking Power Largely Due to Atmospheric Pressure.

Every one is familiar with the saying "to stick like a limpet," but there are not so many who know how it is that a limpet is able to stick as it does to the rocks upon which it passes its existence. The creature is able by means of the central portion of its body, which can be raised independently of the edge or frill which surrounds it, to create a vacuum much in the same way that a piece of soft wet leather can be made to adhere to a smooth surface by pressing out all the air. Thus the so called "strength" of the limpet is largely due to atmospheric pressure.

It is not entirely so, however, for if they are closely examined it will be seen that the shells accommodate themselves around the edges to the surface of the rock upon which the limpet is located, and if removed to another spot the edge of the shell will probably be found to be a very bad fit and the creature's power of adhesion somewhat lessened. If taken by surprise with a smart sidelong blow even a large limpet is easily enough dislodged, but if it is given the slightest warning its power of suction is instantly brought into play and very often considerable force is then necessary before it can be detached.—London Standard.

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in ill ventilated factories—or those who are shut up indoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

DR. PIERCE'S "GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY"

is a blood cleanser and alternative that starts the liver and stomach into vigorous action. It thus assists the body to manufacture rich red blood which feeds the heart—nerves—brain and organs of the body. The organs work smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, strong and strenuous instead of tired, weak and faint. Nowadays you can obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery Tablets, as well as the liquid form from all medicine dealers, or tablets by mail, prepaid in $1 or 50c size. Address R. V. Pierce, M. NEED WIDER MARKETS

LIBERAL POLICY SAME TO-DAY FOR CANADIAN PROGRESS.

Speaking at Woodstock last October during his triumphant tour of Ontario Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he had come to discuss, apart from the excitement of a general election, the question of wider markets for Canadian products, particularly for the West. The future prosperity of the Dominion, he urged, demanded that the problem be dealt with.

"We submitted a solution," said Sir Wilfrid. "We have been defeated and must bow to the verdict of our fellow countrymen. But the problem will not down. It confronts us all—it confronts our country. It is the duty of the Government to solve it by policy and not by temporary expedient. If the Government cannot do this then it must make way for other and more courageous men who will deal with the problem."

Again at St. Johns, Que., on October 6th last, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking to his French-Canadian compatriots, declared that the Liberal policy was still to secure the wider markets that were so badly needed by the producers and consumers of this country.

Sir Wilfrid's policy is not one of emergency. It is the steady policy of Liberalism. In his tariff, as in his naval policy, there is consistent progress commensurate with the growth of the country. He is no dreamer of hysterical emergencies. Lightning and thunder and storms have no part in his political faith.

TWO YEARS OF INERTIA.

CONTRASTED WITH ONE YEAR OF PROGRESS IN UNITED STATES.

Two years have passed since the Tory party defeated reciprocity by their infamous coalition with the Nationalists. In these two years the Borden Government has done absolutely nothing to relieve the incessant demands from both East and West for wider markets and reduced cost of living. True, Hon. Mr. Foster has coasted most of that time fruitlessly in their purses powerful arguments for the speedy return of the Liberal Government.

reasons: First, the American Government has reduced its tariff in order to secure reduced cost of living to its own consumers, thus increasing the demand for Canadian products. The Canadian Government has refused to touch the tariff in order to keep up the cost of living for the benefit of its friends "The Interests." In spite of the fact that this change had long been foreseen, the Borden Government has remained true to its high tariff friends.

TORY PAPER REBELS.

OTTAWA CITIZEN REFUTES TORY IDEA THAT U. S. TARIFF IS MADE FOR CANADA'S BENEFIT.

Not for years have the Canadian people been treated to such an exhibition of Tory absurdity as in the efforts of the Conservative Press to excuse the Borden Government for its refusal to touch the tariff. The Toronto Mail and Empire of October 6th capped the climax when it said: "Canada gets for nothing larger concessions than those for which much more than a fair equivalent was required under the reciprocity pact."

Could absurdity go further? The obvious inference is that the new U. S. tariff has been passed for the benefit of Canada and that Canada gives nothing in return. Instead it is plain to ordinary common sense that the Americans have not considered Canada. They have reduced the tariff in the interests of their own common people. The Borden Government has kept up the tariff bars against the interests of our common people and in the interests of those whose wealth has been created by the higher tariff conditions.

This specious foolery, however, was too much for the digestion of the Conservative "Ottawa Citizen," which declared: "President Woodrow Wilson has overthrown the outer stockade of special privilege in America. The citizens of the Republic have decided to cease taxing themselves by a customs tariff every time they import food stuffs. The tariff will not be reduced in Canada: No concessions. What a triumph! Canadians will continue to tax themselves as usual. Certainly the U. S. grain consumers will take more Canadian grain and farm produce. But Canadians, generous people, will refuse to import anything in return. At most they will take as little as possible and will insist upon paying a tariff toll every time an exchange is made."

How long will the Canadian people tolerate such a condition? The problem still confronts the people. The Tory party is bound hand and foot to the special privilege classes. The Liberals are anxious to continue their

UP TO THE CONSUMER.

UNDER PRESENT TARIFF HE GETS HIT BOTH WAYS.

The Montreal Star of October 7th last, puts the Tory position regarding the tariff in a nutshell. In this connection it must not be forgotten that the Montreal Star led the flag flapping "Disloyalty" campaign of 1911 against reciprocity, while the owner and personal director of the Star, Sir Hugh Graham, personally financed the disloyal Nationalist anti-naval campaign in Quebec.

This is what the Montreal Star says: "One of the first persons to be hit by the new American Tariff is the Canadian consumer. His cost of living has consequently gone up. Those who claim that the opening of the American market would be a great boon to us—a boon which we rejected when we declined to ratify the reciprocity bargain—can now explain to the Canadian consumer, who thought that he was paying enough for his living before.

"The consumer is the weakest, most unorganized and least voiced class in the community. Yet that class is the largest. The consumer suffers, but he has no way of getting back at the condition which makes him suffer. We organize ourselves on the line of production—not of consumption. So when the consumer only is hit there is little political result. But the consumer is simply everybody, and if the consumer is hurt the whole community suffers."

The answer to the Canadian consumer is easy. The reciprocity pact was simply an arrangement by which Canada and the United States agreed to drop their tariff war, each for its own benefit. The Canadian Government would reduce or abolish duties on American products for the benefit of Canadian consumers. The United States Government would reduce or abolish duties on the Canadian products for the benefit of American consumers. This was defeated and Mr. Bourassa has recently shown the infamous means by which the money of "The Interests" financed the double faced campaign to defeat the Laurier Government.

Now the United States Government has reduced its tariff in the interests of its own consumers, without bothering about what Canada or any other country may do, except in the case of wheat, flour and potatoes.

The Canadian government has refused to reduce its tariff in the interests of the Canadian consumers. It will continue to keep the tariff up at the command and for the benefit of "The Interests." The Tory motto is "Stability of High Tariff. The Liberal motto is "Reduce the tariff when possible so as to give the consumer as well as the producer the greatest possible advantage."

The Montreal Star puts the Tory belief clearly when it says: "When the consumer only is hit there is little political result." The ordinary consumer is the ordinary voter. The ordinary voter is beginning to realize how he has been not merely hit but "stung" under Tory Government. There will be a decided political result when the ordinary consumer is given a chance to become the ordinary voter in the ballot box.

THANKSGIVING THOUGHT

Most newspaper men will admit that besides furnishing good stories for the front page around Thanksgiving the turkey also makes good inside matter.

Those who knifed Caesar claimed they loved him. Turkey is a bird Caesar is the name of those who love him best are those who are the first to cut him.

Americans are born parliamentarians. Even at dinner Thanksgiving day somebody will take the chair, and then the crowd will move that the turkey be laid on the table.

How Pugsley Repelled Advance Mother-in-law.

"Perhaps General Grant was actively inhospitable than I am possibly G. Washington shrank the duties of host with greater said Pugsley with a self-congratulatory smile."

CONTRASTED WITH ONE YEAR OF PROGRESS IN UNITED STATES.

Two years have passed since the Tory party defeated reciprocity by their infamous coalition with the Nationalists. In these two years the Borden Government has done absolutely nothing to relieve the incessant demands from both East and West for wider markets and reduced cost of living. True, Hon. Mr. Foster has spent most of that time fruitlessly travelling over the world in a mock heroic effort to widen trade where there is little opportunity for it, while scorning to encourage trade where it would naturally go. So far as easing the burdens of Canadian producers and consumers is concerned, the Borden government has registered an absolute blank.

During the same period the United States has secured a new government which has introduced a complete fiscal revolution. Mr. Woodrow Wilson, on assuming the Presidency, strictly enforced the Liberal doctrine that pre-election promises must be fulfilled, and he was backed by his followers in both Congress and the Senate. During a single special session the American tariff has been reduced by 25%. This reduction is much greater than it really appears since the free and very low tariff lists have been so arranged as to reduce the burden of taxation upon food and the ordinary necessities of life, so that it inures especially to the benefit of the working classes. Cattle, sheep, swine, coal, fish, leather, boots and shoes, harness, agricultural implements, cream, milk, eggs, bacon and all kinds of fresh and smoked meats from being taxed above 25% have suddenly become absolutely free.

INCREASED COST OF LIVING.

CANADA GETS DISADVANTAGES OF RECIPROCITY WITHOUT ITS BENEFITS.

The result to Canada of the great change in the American tariff has been immediate and marked. The day after the Underwood tariff went into effect between four and five million bushels of Canadian oats started moving towards Buffalo and other ports. Lumbermen at Ottawa and other centres reported that vast amounts of Canadian lumber previously bought for delivery after the tariff change were demanded for immediate shipment. Cattle buyers throughout Ontario had been scouring the country for weeks buying animals for delivery as soon as the Underwood tariff became operative.

Everywhere there has been a rush to take advantage of this wider market, with the natural result that prices are going up. The Quebec Telegraph states that prices of fish will rise, as the new tariff enables Canadian fishermen to remain in Canada and still sell their product in American markets without duty. The Ottawa papers say:

"Meat prices to go up and increase may come soon," and that thousands of cattle of all kinds are being shipped from the district to the States. Despatches from every part of Canada show a stiffening in the price of food products as well as most of the staple articles of living.

The cost of living will inevitably be higher in Canada than it has ever been. This is obviously due to two causes, one of which is the primary voter in the ballot box.

A BAD ARRANGEMENT.

CANADIAN FLOUR CHEAPER IN ENGLAND THAN IN CANADA.

Discussing ocean freight rates in a letter to the Ottawa Citizen, Mr. John Corbett, of Montreal, who for 28 years was Foreign Freight Agent for the C.P.R., says: "Canadian flour is much cheaper in London, England, than in the industrial centres in Canada. This fact should be specially interesting to consumers in the Dominion and should make them ask themselves what is the reason."

The reason is easy. The Canadian Customs duty on flour is 60c a barrel. The Canadian consumer has been taxed so that the increased cost of his flour may enable the Canadian millers to sell to foreign consumers more cheaply than to the Canadian.

What would happen if the duty on flour should be abolished so that Canadian wheat producers would be given free entry to the United States and the Canadian and American wheat growers and flour millers put on equal terms?

Coal at Nanaimo.

Probably very few of the miners who have lately been kicking up such a ruction at Nanaimo, B.C., knew how coal was first discovered on Vancouver Island. It was in December, 1849, when an old Nanaimo Indian chief stalked into the fort blacksmith shop, and after gazing in silence over his drawn-up blanket at the glowing forge, where the smithy was forging a horseshoe, said mysteriously in his own language:

"I know where on this island there is the same kind of stuff that you are putting into that fire."

"You do, eh?" said the blacksmith. "Well where is it?"

The chief would not tell. The blacksmith told the Factor about it. The chief was called.

"Look here, Thunderclap," said the Factor, "you fetch in some of that coal and you can have your old gun fixed up at the blacksmith shop without costing you a skin—and a bottle of rum thrown in."

"Ugh!" grunted the chief, and he stalked out.

In April, 1850, when the rivers were running high, the chief came down to Victoria with his canoe loaded with coal. A prospecting party was sent out and located the coal mines of Nanaimo on the spot where the city of Nanaimo now stands.

Poor Rainfall.

In parts of Australia, where the average yearly rainfall is not more than 10 inches, a square mile of land will support only eight or nine sheep. In Buenos Ayres the same area, with 34 inches of rain, supports 2,560 sheep.

Try to have your Thanksgiving table and everything that is served look attractive, even if the bill of fare is to be simple, and try to have something new this year. If you can take time to arrange a centerpiece it will pay you. A flat oval basket resting upon a high wire frame is filled with moss, the frame being concealed by wild grape vines. Golden pears and pink and white grapes are piled high in the basket and fine clusters of grapes wired to each end. At the base purple pink and white grapes are heaped on a mass of leaves.

REMEMBER THE HYPHEN.

THANKSGIVING IN THE WOODS

URBANITES need not think they are the only persons who have a good time on Thanksgiving day, for if they could but peep into the activities of the people on the farms and see how they observe the holiday it would not be surprising if just a tinge of envy should be incurred.

Thanksgiving day on the farm is a day of festivity and jollification. It is a genuine product of enjoyment, dependent sometimes largely upon conditions of the weather and upon the natural facilities provided for enjoyment, and it is entirely unadulterated with the more modern and perhaps superficial (at least from a ruralite's viewpoint) contrivances for entertainment which the city affords. If a nation can be judged by the manner in which its national holidays are observed the character of the people who inhabit the country and the city can be determined by the application of the same rule.

Probably the majority of the men folks on the farm turn their thoughts to hunting on Thanksgiving day. The instinct to go out on Thanksgiving morning and shoot a turkey for the holiday feast is still quite strong in the average ruralite, although the birds have become few in number. There are comparatively few places now in our vast Dominion where a hunt, suits in the capture of a turkey. Those good old days when people did not need to consult the market price of turkey when planning their Thanksgiving feast have gone by, and even on the farm some thought is given to the market price of the fine young gobbler before it is decided to serve him up for the holiday dinner instead of shipping him to the city market.

But the larder of the provident farm family is generally well filled, and perhaps less thought is directed to the Thanksgiving dinner as to the manner of sport and enjoyment that can be obtained out of the day. Fowls of some kind are always to be found in abundance about the barnyard, and the preparations for the dinner require but little time once when a decision is made as to what the menu shall consist of. And "butchering time" has just passed, and in the cellar or the smoke house are plenty of possibilities that would make the mouth of an urbanite water.

So thoughts turn to the field and forest for a day's hunting. And it seems to be about the only day in the year when nearly every man and boy old enough to handle a gun goes hunting. The farmer will let the hunters from the city bang about all over his farm during the early part of the season, when game is plenty—if it ever is—but he will keep right ahead husking his corn, baling his hay, hauling in pumpkins, etc., until Thanksgiving day comes around. Then he gets the hunting fever.

There is no work done on Thanksgiving. It would be almost a heathenish act not to "take the day off," no matter how urgent the farm work may be. If there is snow on Thanksgiving it is a regular day in paradise for the

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

NO SENSE IN EITHER.

Two Ways of Telling a Story, One of Which Pointed a Moral.

Two men entered a train at a small station out west and took seats facing an elderly gentleman. They fell to telling hunting stories with great animation and many, many oaths.

Noticing that the old gentleman was an interested listener, one of the men spoke to him and asked whether he, too, was not a hunter, with a story or two worth hearing.

The told gentleman thought he could tell one, and this is what he said:

"One day I thought I would go hunting, so I took my tin pan tinner box gun and went up into tin pan tinner box woods on the side of a tin pan tinner box mountain, and I waited a tin pan tinner box long time; and then I saw a tin pan tinner box fine buck coming toward me, so I put my tin pan tinner box gun to my shoulder and fired. And that tin pan tinner box buck fell right in its tin pan tinner box tracks, and it was the finest tin pan tinner box buck I ever killed." After a pause he said, "How do you like my story?"

"Oh, the story is all right, but I don't see what all that 'tin pan tinner box' has to do with it."

"Well," replied the old gentleman, "that is just my way of swearing."

"I don't see much sense in swearing that way," said the other, with manifest disgust.

To which the old gentleman responded; "There is as much sense in my way of swearing as there is in yours, young man."—Youth's Companion.

men and boys, for then it is quite an easy matter to track Mr. Bunny to his hiding place and chase him out to become a target for the hunters. The rabbit being about the only kind of game that cannot be exterminated, but sticks like the faithful dog wherever space is cleared away for a home in the forest, it is the most common game that is hunted on Thanksgiving. Although there is often about one hunter for every rabbit, this does not seem materially to diminish the sport, for after the day is over those who are short in their string of game take consolation in the fact that they "had a good time anyway."

Aside from rabbit hunting, there is other game to be found in most country districts, such as pheasants and quail. But whether all this game has been killed earlier in the season by professional hunters makes little difference to the people in the country, for they will have their annual hunt on Thanksgiving day at any rate. It is an annual custom with them, and the woods and fields constitute a sort of Mecca to which they make their visits as regularly as the holiday comes.

But with it all the Thanksgiving dinner is looked forward to with a sort of primary importance that indicates that the farmer and the resident of the city are not so much unlike in their holiday inclinations after all.

DORLAND SCHOOL FAIR

The School Fair held at Dorland on Friday, October 10th, was a magnificent success. The attendance was about 800. The pupils of the schools at Adolphustown, Dorland, U.E.L., The Pines, Conway, Parma, Sandhurst and Sillsville attended, and all the exhibits were made by these school children.

The main tent was filled with samples of oats, barley, potatoes, corn and roots that equaled any fair held in the county. The bread, cookies, preserves and aprons made and shown by the girls were an eye-opener. The collections of weeds, weed seeds, and insects were also very fine.

A wonderful showing of White Wyandottes was made. One hundred and sixty-six birds were exhibited. These chickens were all hatched and reared from eggs supplied to the school children last spring by the Department of Agriculture.

The live stock exhibit was good. Fifteen colts lined up before the Judge, and twenty calves, mostly Holsteins. The Adolphustown Women's Institute supplied refreshments in their tent on the grounds.

SPEECHES.

Mr. D. A. Nesbitt, P. S. I., the chairman, in his opening address stated that the School Fair was the best way to interest the farm boy and girl in Agriculture, and to teach children to appreciate the advantages of farm life. Mr. W. Bert Roadhouse, Deputy Minister of Agriculture outlined the growth of the Rural School Fair movement in Ontario, over forty being held this year under the auspices of the Department of Agriculture. It is the idea to extend the School Fair until each County is covered, and then a County School Fair will be held at which the prize-winners will compete. He complimented Dorland on having the best all-round School Fair he had ever attended in Ontario.

Mr. M. S. Madole, of the Agricultural Advisory Committee, complimented the School children on their exhibits, and stated that the Committee would lend every assistance in their power to enlarge and extend the School Fairs in the county.

Mr. J. C. Stuart, of the Live Stock Branch, Ottawa, Mr. H. Johnson, President Adolphustown Farmer's Club, and Mr. T. Gibbard gave interesting speeches.

The concluding item on the programme was the paying of the prize money to the children. Each child was called to the platform and given their money in silver. Over $60 was paid out in prize money.

As a result of the success of this first School Fair, the Department of Agriculture, will organize fairs in other sections of the County.

STALLION INSPECTION UNDER THE ONTARIO STILLION ACT FOR THE SEASON OF 1914.

After the inspection of stallions had been completed last fall it was found that there were quite a number of stallion owners who, through not appreciating the value of the Act, or through lack of information did not have their Stallions presented for inspection when the Inspectors were on their routes in the fall. A supplementary inspection was held in April to inspect stallions owned by such men. This made the inspection very thorough, but besides causing a

A supplementary inspection was held in April to inspect stallions owned by such men. This made the inspection very thorough, but, besides causing additional expense, it in some cases caused considerable delay in having the Enrollment Certificates issued. To overcome the necessity of a second inspection for the season of 1914 it was decided at a meeting of the Stallion Enrollment Board held in the Secretary's Office, Parliament Build- ings, Toronto, on Monday, Sept. 22nd, that there would only be one inspection of Stallions during the year ending July 31st, 1914, which inspection will commence about February 17th, 1914. The Inspectors will visit each Stallion owner at his stable, provided that he makes application for inspection to the Secretary, R. W. Wade, on or before February 1st, 1914.

Trade was active, with sales of full car- loads of common bulls at $4.25 to $4.50, and canning cows at $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. Indications are that the Ameri- can buyers will clean up the market of the above class of stock.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for butchers' cat- tle, prices being firmly maintained under a good demand, but choice steers were scarce; in fact, there were none to be had. Sales of full loads of good steers were made at $6.55, and common steers at $5.75, while picked lots of good stock brought as high as $7 per 100 pounds. A few choice, heavy bulls sold at $5.50 to $5.75, and good at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds.

Altho supplies of small meats were large, a very firm feeling prevailed in the market, owing to the fact that there was a brisk demand from local buyers for sheep and lambs, as most of them are now providing for their winter requirements, and consequently an active trade was done.

Some of the drovers were asking an advance of 25c per 100 pounds for lambs, but they failed to establish it.

A somewhat steadier feeling prevailed in the market for live hogs.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6.25 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.70; canners, $3.50 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.75 to $6; do., medium, $5 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $5.75; milkers, choice, each, $7 to $8; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers $55 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4; lambs, $6 to $6.75. Hogs, f.o.b., $8.75 to $9.

Calves, $5 to $15.

An Unburied Picture.

Rossetti secured permission in 1869 to reopen the coffin of his wife in order to secure the manuscripts of some poems which he had buried with her seven years before.

Some such incident might have occurred in connection with J. M. W. Turner if his desire to be buried wrapped up in his own painting of "Carthage" had been carried out. There was some difficulty in selling the painting, and the artist kept the canvas by him. He always said he would be wrapped in it when he was buried and even went so far as to ask Chantrey if as his executor he would fulfill his wishes on that point.

"No doubt," answered the sculptor, "I shall bury you rolled up in your picture if it is one of the conditions of your will, but I would take you up next day and unroll you!"

Found a Way.

Teacher—Now, children, try to figure just this once without counting on your fingers. How much is three and four. Peperl (looking under the bench after a long wait)—Seven. Teacher—Right. Four and six. Peperl (again peeping under the bench)—Ten. Teacher—Hold up there, you little rascal! I'll teach you to count on your fingers. (Takes Peperl's hands and clasps them behind his back. Now, then, five and three? Peperl (after another long look under the bench)—Eight. Teacher—Well, how did you manage to do that? Peperl—With my toes, teacher. —F. H. gende Blatter.

A Trick With Figures.

Desire a person to think of a number. Tell him to triple it and take the exact half of that.

Triple that half if the number is even, if odd multiply the larger half by three. Then ask him how many times that answer contains nine, for the answer will contain the double of that number of nines and one more if it be odd.

Thus, if the number thought of is five its triple will be fifteen, which cannot be divided by two without a remainder. The greater half of fifteen is eight. If we multiply this by three, we have twenty-four, which contains nine twice. So we shall have 2 plus 2 plus 1 equals 5, the number first thought of.

Interesting Group of Islands.

The Maldivé Islands in the Indian Ocean are very little known. They are atolls, or groups of coral islets, and are situated 400 miles west of Ceylon. Of the latter crown colony of Great Britain they are a dependency, having over them a sultan who pays allegiance to and receives the protection of the Ceylon Government. The inhabitants number about 30,000 and profess the Mohammedan religion. Their chief industry is catching and salting fish for the Ceylon market, the exports of cured and salted fish to Ceylon amounting to about 200,000 hundredweight a year, valued at about $500,000. Cocoanuts are grown on the islands and a considerable quantity of copra is sent to Ceylon to be exported with Ceylon copra to other countries.

THANKSGIVING IN THE HOUSE NEXT DOOR

"THINK," said the minister's little wife, "of eating eggs for a Thanksgiving dinner!"

The Rev. Robert Kean smiled down into her wistful eyes.

"It is strange," her husband mused, "that somebody hasn't invited us to dinner."

"Well, of course they don't dream how hard up we are," Mrs. Kean murmured, "and each one thinks the other has asked us."

In the days that followed no one would have imagined that the mind of the trim and smiling little minister's wife was constantly distracted by the problem of feeding four hungry people on a few dollars.

"I can't have turkey," said little Mrs. Kean stoutly, "and that settles it."

But it was harder to deny the "kid-dies."

"No, dears," the little mother said, "we can't have a feast this year. But we are going to be thankful just the same."

The children looked at her seriously. "I don't see anything to be thankful for," said Dudley, the big boy of twelve. "What can the Lord expect if he doesn't give us a turkey?"

"Oh, my dear!" was his mother's shocked reproof. But little Marion piped up, "I'm just going to be thankful and thankful and thankful and ask the Lord to send us the turkey anyhow."

Mrs. Kean told her husband of the comments. "Poor dears," she sighed; "they don't understand the blessedness of giving."

"There are some older people who don't understand," said her husband wearily. "Look at our neighbor next door. Never a penny does he give for the poor, and he has riches that he can't count."

But the old gentleman across the way was not worrying about the opinion of his neighbors.

"Mary," he said to his cook the night before Thanksgiving, "cook me an old fashioned dinner tomorrow, turkey and all the fixings."

But fate had decreed that no turkey and fixings should be served in the house of the rich old gentleman, for Thanksgiving morning he suffered an attack of gout that kept him tied to his bed, with strict orders from the doctor as to diet. No orders, however, having been given the cook, she proceeded to cook the dinner.

The aroma of it came up the stairway and tickled the nostrils of the rich old gentleman.

"Just my luck," he grumbled, "not to be able to eat it," and he sat up in bed to ring his little bell and to order all the doors shut to keep out the tantalizing smell.

The movement brought his eyes on a level with the window, and he looked straight across into the dining room of the minister's little flat.

Listlessly his eyes rested on the group; then suddenly he leaned forward and scanned the table. In front

ONTARIO POLITICS

Not content with watching the Dominion bye-elections scheduled for decision in Ontario, the Whitney Government is going to stage one of its own in the Provincial field.

The opening of the Constituency of Peel is the 8th bye-election since the General elections in December, 1911. The majority secured by Samuel Charters, the Government member, who has resigned presumably to become Registrar of Peel County, was over 700. With a good candidate—and the Liberals are said to be bringing out a first-class man—this majority should be very greatly reduced, and in fact there a chance of making a turn-over and electing the Liberal candidate. The Opposition goes into this contest with a noticeable supply of optimism and enthusiasm. The constituency as a whole is said to be strongly for temperance, and the indications are that the Abolish-the-Bar policy will not only secure the enthusiasm support of the Liberals but will effect to a considerable degree the normal Tory vote. Peel looks to be better fighting ground for the Liberal than any of the other places in which bye-elections have been held.

The cumulative effect of Mr. Rowell's advanced programme of social legislation to the advantage of the common people, the general public of the Province is becoming manifest. Its real strength admittedly will not be exhibited until the general election for bye-elections are regarded by many voters as academic rather than practical, but in this particular contest the Rowell programme should make a strong appeal.

"What are you going to do?"

"Never mind what we'll do."

Dupuy now delivered the prize threat that he had saved for use in the last extremity, should it arise, and he was justified in assuming that it had arisen.

"A temporary injunction would certainly issue in a case like this," he said sternly. "I'll get one and close your shop."

"Sure! That's the thing! Get Bartelmy to issue one," suggested the managing editor sarcastically.

"I will and put a stop to your game! This muck raking mania is sweeping the country like a disease, breeding madmen everywhere. Brand, this is your finish!" He shook his fist violently.

Brand jumped up in anger and strode toward the lawyer lobbyist.

"Now, you get out of here or I'll throw you out!" he announced hotly.

"You will, will you? You just wait!" Dupuy backed slowly out of the doorway.

Brand hastened out into the composing room.

"Mac, they're beginning to squirm already!" he cried.

"We'll make them squirm more in the morning," responded the night editor significantly.

CHAPTER XIII.

BRAND, busily engaged in writing the caption for the cut that was to reveal Bartelmy in his true light, was interrupted once more—this time by the entrance of the greenish hued face of the poet reporter, Powell.

"You sent for me, sir?" asked the new scribe.

"So you've covered a suicide?" said Brand.

"Powow's" eyes rolled wildly. He clasped his hands and his knees shook in his horror at what he had learned.

"Oh, yessir—a terrible sight! I shall dre-e-a-m of it, sir! I would take a Dante to write it. Oh, I!"

"What was this girl's name?" asked Brand in matter of fact tones.

"Madeline,"

"Madeline what?"

"Her last name," the poet asked dazedly. "I guess I don't remember. Oh, yes, it was Jenks—Madeline Jenks!" He spoke feverishly.

Brand picked up the poet's first newspaper story and began to read it. In spite of the high pressure of events that night in the Advance office, in spite of his ever present fear that Bartelmy and Dupuy might in some way persuade Nolan to cover the sensational bribery story killed, this man's side adapted to the purpose Judge Bartelmy had in his unprincipled mind when he sent her to the Advance office. "You are my only hope," he had told her after Dupuy had at first failed to locate Nolan. "You must go and plead with Wheeler Brand or else I am ruined. Your father will be ruined absolutely." At the sight of her father's emotion and yielding to the fervent pleadings of her only living parent she had willingly consented to undertake the mission. Unpleasant though she knew it would be, she believed it her duty to stand by in his hour of dire need the father whom she loved, the father whom she did not know.

As she entered the office and paused in conjecture as to just how she would proceed she heard footsteps hurriedly ascending the stairs, and, withdrawing into a shadow in a corner, she saw Michael Nolan and Mrs. Nolan cross the hall and disappear into the composing room.

"Thank heaven!" she murmured fervently. "They will stop this story, which father says is a horrible lie."

Wheeler Brand will never forget—has since said so from the depths of his soul—the shock that went through him when he saw Nolan, accompanied by his wife, making their way toward him on that memorable night.

McHenry was speaking when they entered.

"There is your first page, Brand," he was saying, "and it sends Bartelmy to state prison."

The managing editor gazed approvingly at the appearance of the page of type and the cut in the form as it lay exposed on one of the stones under a shaded electric light. He looked up to congratulate McHenry on the manner in which he had completed the makeup of the page when his jaw suddenly felt. His eyes took on an amazed stare. He was looking straight over the night editor's shoulder. McHenry caught Brand's expression and whirled about. Then he, too, saw the owner of the Advance and his wife draw near. The triumphant air with which the wife and mother sailed along by his side boded no good to Brand and his story.

Nolan paused in front of the form without looking at the contents at first.

"Wheeler," he said kindly, "I've been notified about this story, and I think great reformer and knows it all. We other people have a right to our opinions, too, and I don't see why you and your family should be made to suffer on account of him as we have had to ever since you took him up."

Judith Bartelmy heard the stormy scene, lived a part of it herself huddled in the managing editor's office. She felt that Nolan would not let the story be used from what she had heard, and she could not suppress a pang of pain that pierced her heart at what she believed to be the fanatical vindictiveness of Wheeler Brand against her father. Yet she was a true woman, and she could not, in spite of her loyalty to her parent, avoid feeling a touch of pride at his strength of character, his determination, at the sacrifices he had made, to accomplish what he believed, even if foolishly, to be his duty.

"They don't need me," she finally muttered, and, gathering up her costly skirts, she tripped daintily across the paper strewn floor, out into the hall and down to her carriage.

Nolan dropped his head in thought when his wife had finished her tirade.

He paced up and down nervously. He looked at the clock, then at the form with its accusing contents, then at Brand, then at his wife.

"I'll go and telephone Judge Bartelmy," put in Dupuy. "He'll be anxious."

The lawyer took himself off.

Brand saw the danger of delay. He doubted if any man would be able to successfully withstand the pressure that Bartelmy and Nolan's family would be able to bring to bear on the owner in another twenty-four hours.

"No, no!" he exclaimed to Nolan. "You would fail me again. I have tried to prove this judge's guilt to the people, but I fear I have only succeeded in proving it to his daughter. A day's delay would be fatal, I know. At least Bartelmy could get another judge to issue an injunction against us even if he would not dare to do it himself. And there are other steps he might take."

His voice rose higher, and he worked himself into a frenzy of earnestness.

He stood before the little group gathered around the ink black form and continued his impassioned words:

"You know I thought we were going to be absolutely unmuzzled here. You were a free man. Poverty couldn't frighten you, and you had seen both sides of life. You promised to back me up, no matter what it cost, so long as we printed the truth, but at the first big test you fail me."

Mrs. Nolan was on the point of becoming hysterical in her agitation.

"Michael, Michael!"—she began.

"There, mother, you go home with Sylvester. He's waiting outside for you. After all, this is a man's job we've got here. I am the head of the family, and I will settle this matter in my own way," he said sternly. "You must not attempt further to interfere."

He led her out of the room.

Brand spoke to McHenry.

"Did you hear, Mac?" he asked. "He won't decide to run it."

"It's tough, old man—it's tough!"

"This is such a live thing I don't see how I can kill it," the managing editor said, rubbing his hand over the face of the form.

"That's the best first page ever made up in America," said McHenry, with out that it would as well injure reputation in other newspaper or where obedience to one's superior in any well regulated organization a man's first duty under all circumstances.

"Why, man," he exclaimed quizzically, "you're surely not going to this story?"

Before Brand could give an answer to this last question, even if he had tended to do so, Nolan broke in on a pair.

"Mr. Nolan," began Brand, "have heard the whole story of miserable affair, both sides of it—my's and my own, from our lips. Whatever defense or explanation Bartelmy gave you I don't know. So far as I am concerned, I told the facts and the truth. You know that by this time. You must believe it. Therefore why do you how in heaven's name can you take?"

Michael Nolan's face shone with light of determination.

"Wheeler, my boy," he said, "I learned much from you. I have no contact with such a man as you have led a rough life for most of my career. When I rose to be chief of the Street Railway Workers' union, I did so simply through my ruggedness of character, my ability to men. Then I was driven out into the world, an outcast, and became a laborer in the mines. When the came that I owned my own mine was again a case of fight, fight, fight for the lawless claim jumpers threatened me above ground, and the less floods assailed me below ground. So in the life I led I did not get opportunity to study or even be familiar with the important questions and the problems that confront men that guide the policy of newspapers."

Nolan drew close to Brand, placed his hand affectionately on young editor's shoulder.

"But you, Wheeler, you have told me much about those big issues that did not know, and you have shown me the high ideals that should guide the newspaper writer, the newspaper editor and the newspaper owner well. You are right in this case," his voice rose to majestic heights. "Wheeler Brand, I have learned from you the Advance is more than a newspaper. It is a great, throbbing, potent force. It is the strong arm of Right standing against the evil arm of the Wrong. So we must not fail. We must not delay. Show the thieves up, Wheeler. Let the story be pressed."

Nolan turned quickly away and tensed out and down into the street.

A warm glow of enthusiasm spread over the face of Wheeler Brand as he picked up a bundle of proofs.

"We'll show them up!" he cried untidily. "We'll show them up, we'll put them down!"

Brand picked up the poet's first newspaper story and began to read it. In spite of the high pressure of events that night in the Advance office, in spite of his ever present fear that Bartelmy and Dupuy might in some way persuade Nolan to cover the sensational bribery story killed, this many-sided young man found the time to bother with the fanciful young poet reporter and his fantastic first article.

"Madeline Jenks, eh?" commented Brand, turning over the pages. "Well, the first place you mention her name is on page 3."

He plucked off the first two pages and threw them on the floor. Powell winced painfully at the massacre of his first reportorial offspring. "Begin there," said Brand. Powell lunged downward to rescue his first two pages, but Brand kicked them away from him. "Where'd she live?" he next asked.

Powell clasped his hands and gazed plaintively at the ceiling.

"Over a chop suey cafe, sir."

"Number and street?"

"Two forty-three and a half West Pearl street."

Brand threw away two more pages, Powell watching him anxiously the while.

"Put that next. Here. Madeline Jenks." Brand began to write, "an inmate of 243½ West Pearl street. What did she do?"

"She destroyed herself utterly!" the new reporter wailed.

Brand went on writing.

"Is she dead?"

"Yes, sir."

"Shot and killed herself—when?"

"Tonight at 9 o'clock."

Brand wrote on.

"Last night at 9 o'clock. Why?"

Powell answered very intensely:

"Oh, she could no longer face the ghastliness of her existence. She knew she"—

"She was weary of life in the streets."

"I don't blame her," Brand commented to himself. He turned to Powell. "There's your story. Thirty words—you had 3,000. And remember the story of the creation was told in 600 words."

Powell picked up the pages of his story which Brand had discarded and walked dejectedly away.

"Mac," Brand ordered, "here's a dance hall suicide. Put it with local brevities, will you?"

Had Brand at this moment been able to see through the wall that separated the composing room from the hall he would have witnessed a sight that would have deprived him of some or the self possession that marked his present demeanor. A figure clad in an elaborate evening gown crept softly up the stairway, stood irresolutely at the landing and then turned into the managing editor's office. Judith Bartelmy probably never looked more beautiful in her life than she did that night. A flush of excitement enhanced the soft allurements of her exquisite features, and the low cut neck of her sleeveless gown completed a picture of feminine loveliness that, innocently enough on her part, was admirably it best that I read it carefully myself, analyze it and learn all the circumstances under which it was procured before I allow it to go to press. That is a task which cannot be done in the short time that remains before press time, so we had best let it go over until tomorrow—delay it one day. That won't hurt the story any."

Mrs. Nolan clutched at the ex-miner's arm and cried shrilly:

"Now, now, Michael, that's not your usual way to explain things to one of your employees. Order him to destroy all this miserable stuff about the judge at once. Don't hesitate like this. Think what it means to me, to the children, to us," she pleaded.

"There, there, mother; you keep out of this," said Nolan kindly, yet firmly. "I'm trying to do the best I can for you. It's because of you that I'm here now. But you see"—

Ed Dupuy burst excitedly in upon them, and as the typesetters were beginning to become distracted from their work owing to the unusual situation Brand began to fear that this new intruder would prove the final demoralizer of the entire night shift.

"Mr. Nolan," cried Dupuy, "we haven't a minute to lose! They are almost ready to go to press." He looked intently at the newspaper owner.

"Yes, quite right. We do go to press very soon," cried Brand confidently, "and I know Michael Nolan is the man who will order it done."

"Michael," cried Mrs. Nolan at the top of her voice, which rose sharply over the din of the typesetting machines, "are you going to stand for this? Mr. Brand acts as if he owned the Advance and treats you as if you were the office boy. He thinks he's a

"This is such a live thing I don't see how I can kill it," the managing editor said, rubbing his hand over the face of the form.

"That's the best first page ever made up in America," said McHenry, with justifiable professional pride.

Brand was inconsolable.

"I've been working ten years for just this thing," he said, "something so plain that even children would see what the big thieves are doing."

"You go home!" Brand suddenly ordered McHenry.

"What?" was the surprised exclamation.

"I said go home!"

Brand's face was beginning to twitch nervously. He stood in the middle of the composing room, under the flooding white glare from a sixty-four candle power electric light, and clinched and unclenched his hands, not daring to look McHenry squarely in the face. The night editor began to guess what was passing through Brand's mind.

"Yes, but," he began to protest—"but"—

Brand cut him short, saying agitatedly:

"I am still managing editor."

McHenry now realized plainly that the intensely earnest Brand had decided to run the story that very night regardless of Nolan's attitude. It would be an easy matter, as Nolan, of course, would not remain at the office much longer. And McHenry well knew that such an act would not only bring about Brand's discharge from the Advance,

Two figures suddenly in the doorway of the composing Ed Dupuy's telephone call was ringing to show results. Judge Bar and Judith, ready for a last effort prevent the publication of the demnatory article, quite unobscured glanced to where Brand and his ciate editor were at work. "come in yet. Wait a few moments whispered the judge. The girl slid down the hall into the managing tor's little office, the coils of vapor from which she had previously able to hear all that took place in the composing room. Bartelmy proceeded directly to the form before which two editors were working, and I saw that he must undergo another pleasant encounter before the plot began to whirl off his story. glanced impatiently at the clock raised his brows questioningly to judge.

"Mr. Brand, has Mr. Nolan here tonight?" asked Bartelmy.

"Yes."

"Have you received instructions about this story?"

"Yes."

"What were those instructions the story to be printed?"

"I am not at liberty to discuss any outside person the communications I receive from the owner, but I add for your information that story will be on the press in a few minutes."

At this latest declaration of Br Judith could restrain herself no longer. She rushed through the door.

Brand and McHenry began eagerly to inspect the final proofs of the Bartelmy story. Two figures suddenly stood in the doorway of the composing room. A telephone call was beginning to show results. Brand rubbed the back of his hand across his eyes as though they were deceiving him.

"Good God, it is Judith!" he exclaimed. Then he turned to his assistant. "Here, Mac, hurry—take this form away."

The girl's face and eyes were aglow with the effects of the nervous strain under which she labored on that epoch making and epoch breaking night before the startled night shift of the Advance.

"Wheeler, you're not going to use that picture?" she pleaded.

"Take the form away," again ordered Brand, his voice almost failing him.

"No, no; don't send it! Wait, wait!" She threw herself over the ink form, her arms outstretched.

Brand tried to draw her away.

"Judith, please!" he protested.

"They can't have!"—She was hysterical.

"Go to lunch, boys," ordered Brand to the typesetters.

"We'll miss the mail," protested McHenry.

"I don't care. Go to lunch."

The compositors ceased work at the linotypes and, wondering and whispering, slowly filed out.

"Judith," Brand besought her, "won't you?"

"Listen to me, Wheeler," she broke in. "I know everything. Father has told me everything about—his—guilt. You understand what it means to me—what he is to me. You must spare him for me!"

"Judith, it's impossible."

"But it is the human thing to do. Oh, forget these ideals. Be just a man—a man who loves a woman and protects her. You do love me, I know, in spite of everything that you've done."

"Yes, I love you!" he cried fervently.

"And Wheeler, dear, I've not changed," she told him fondly. "I can see how right you mean to be in what you are trying to do, but in this you are wrong. Whatever my father may have done, his intentions were honest. He had been involved by others and when he tried to extricate himself it was too late. They, not he, were guilty. It was for their sakes, not his own, that he offered you that money, so you see you are wrong. Why, Wheeler, if you belonged to me and committed a crime I would die to shield you from the penalty."

Brand answered her quickly.

"That is wrong reasoning."

"No, no; it is right. That must always be," she cried. "It is like—a law of life. Can't you see that too? I belong to you. Yes, I belong to you, and you should shield me. You must feel toward my father as he were your own because he is mine. It's not possible that you would do this thing to your own father. Think of him that way—your own father! You'll not regret it. I'll make it up to you with all my love for all the rest of life! Wheeler, say you will do what I ask." She broke down completely and sobbed brokenly, leaning across the form.

"Oh, say you will do what I ask!"

Brand tried to raise her, but she clung to him frenziedly.

"Judith, for God's sake, don't!" he said.

"Yes, yes; you must, you shall!" She tray my trust just as you have betrayed yours."

Bartelmy raised his hand deprecatingly. Brand, however, drew a deep breath and went resolutely on. He spoke to both the girl and the judge.

"Judith, if at the cost of my life I could spare you this grief I would do it gladly. But even that would do no good. You would always despise me for failing, when my test came and always despise yourself for having caused me to fail. Can't you see you and I are nothing in all this? The individual does not exist, only the cause. Judge Bartelmy, that story goes to press," he cried, raising his eyes to meet those of Judith's father.

Bartelmy saw that he had played his last card. It was his highest trump, but it had failed to win. What Judith could not do be surely, under the existing circumstances, could not do. Nolan, the only man who could save him if he would, had gone, he knew not where.

And it was now press time. All was over. Bartelmy took a single step toward his daughter.

"Brand, that story is my obituary," he said in low tones.

"Oh, no," was the response in saddened voice. "Men like you don't finish that way. You'll have about six hours, judge, before that story is read by the public."

Judith, too, was ready to admit that her last and culminating effort had been in vain. Wearied and unstrung, she raised herself from the fatal form that was to besmirch the name and the father that had been her source of pride. She crossed over toward her father, who stood silent and despairingly in the shadow of one of the linotype machines.

"Goodby, Wheeler. I am going out of your life forever. I am sorry it had to end like this—all our plans, all our hopes!"

The thought of the happy moments that she had spent with Wheeler, building air castles for their future when they would be man and wife, came over her. It swept down the wall of reserve and determination with which she had deemed it necessary to surround herself. She halted and gazed steadfastly into her father's face. Slowly she raised her hands and pressed them against her cheeks as though horror stricken. Then she turned, rushed impulsively back to Wheeler Brand, and, bending tensely toward him, she searched his strong young face as best her tear dimmed eyes would let her. He returned her gaze unflinchingly.

Judge Bartelmy saw the girl's struggle to decide between the father who had dishonored her name and the arms. She sighed contentedly as she laid her head upon his shoulder.

"Yes," he answered the judge.

Judge Bartelmy stood watching the united couple for a moment before he turned and walked away, muttering as he went: "Six hours. One may travel far in these days in that time."

The great ship heaved and lunged through the giant seas that swept over her bows, out of the freezing night, out of the cold northeast. The captain and the first officer, lashed to opposite ends of the lofty bridge, choked in the flying spume of wind-riven midocean.

Somewhere a deep-toned bell told of the hour in the sailors' accustomed fashion. From somewhere out of the depths of the vast groaning fabric tumbled the men of the watch who were now to go on duty to relieve their storm-beaten fellows.

And somewhere down in the shivering, rearing hull a gaunt-faced, hollow-eyed man lay on the saffron-hued velvet cushions of a narrow couch at the side of a luxurious stateroom. He was fully dressed in spite of the lateness of the hour and of the fact that he was sleeping—just as he had been the night before. He tossed uneasily. Sometimes he thrust his hands out convulsively as though to ward off a threatening danger. He began to talk incoherently. The snip rolled, and a tray containing dishes and an evening

"Don't wait a few moments," said the judge. The girl slipped the ball into the managing editor's office, the coin of vantage which she had previously been to hear all that took place in the living room. Bartelmy proceeded to the form before which the editors were working, and Brand at he must undergo another unit encounter before the presses to whirl off his story. was losing all control of herself in her desperation.

"Judith, listen to me," he said inspiringly. "I'm not the man who loves you or is loved by you. I've no right to think of you or of myself. I'm an instrument to an end in the history of a great God. Can't you see this thing as I do?"

"I can't reason. I can't argue. I can only feel."

The judge had drawn a few steps away from the pair during the scene between them. He viewed with calculating satisfaction the battle that his daughter was waging so valiantly in his behalf, and he had felt that not even the young stoic Brand could resist this powerful and final appeal of the girl he loved. At his daughter's last outcry he drew near to the editor.

"Brand, are you human?" he demanded strongly, pointing to the prostrated girl with his walking stick.

"Human, human, Judge Bartelmy!" he exclaimed. "You are true to yourself to the end. You bring your daughter here so that by torturing me with the sight of her suffering you may escape the penalty of your thievery. I was willing she should think me heartless to spare her the greater pain of knowing you as you are. But now you bring her here in her innocence to repeat to me your lies. You're degrading her, dragging her down to your own level, just as you did her mother before her. If she lets you go on using her it will be with her eyes open."

Judith raised her head amazedly.

"What are you saying?" she asked.

Brand turned to her and then to the judge.

"Why, he's lied to you just as he's lied all his life. He told you he was trying to shield others. He lied. He never shielded any one but himself. Judge Bartelmy, the power of men like you must be destroyed. When justice is corrupted the nation rots. If I keep silent about you and your methods I become your accomplice; I be-was wise enough in the ways of the world to know that again was Brand to prove a victor over him.

The girl stood immovable a moment. Then she extended her arm toward her lover. Judith Bartelmy had made her choice.

The judge's features showed but little of the storm into which his emotions had been plunged. His years of practiced self control had come to his aid and enabled him to face the ruin of his career and his life and his name without the frenzied demonstration in which most men in his position would have indulged. To the last he was the cool, polished, suave hypocrite that he had been in the beginning, when those who sought to foot the public for private gain found him a willing tool.

"He is right," Bartelmy said to Judith. "He has told you the truth tonight—the absolute truth." He looked at his watch. "Six hours, did you say, Mr. Brand?" he asked.

Brand had gathered Judith in his

The snip rolled, and a tray containing dishes and an evening meal that had gone untouched crashed to the floor. "The press—the printing press—has started," he muttered disjunctly as the sound of the breaking dishes penetrated into his wearied brain. His hand instinctively crept under one of the cushions. It grasped and for a moment fumbled with a blue steel object, which it drew weakly forth—a revolver. The shock of the cold steel roused the sleeper. He opened his eyes and gazed fascinatedly at the instrument of death. With a cry of terror he relaxed his fingers, and the object dropped to the floor. He groaned the groan of a lost soul in the anguish of its never ceasing torture. He turned his face to the wall and tried in vain to close his eyes in sleep.

Judgment had been pronounced in the case of "JUDGE BARTELMY VERSUS THE PEOPLE, WHEELER BRAND AND THE ADVANCE."

Making the Little Farm Pay

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

SMALL fruits pay well and afford great pleasure to the family on a little farm. They are ideal products where the place is small and situated near a city, so that they may be sold to families or hotels and restaurants. Much waste and loss of profit will be avoided by delivering to private customers.

An advantage in raising berries comes from the quick growth as well as from the small acreage required. It takes only a year to get started with small fruits. They can be grown in an orchard and will return a large amount of money in the years when peach and apple trees are coming to maturity. The more this orchard ground is stirred the better, and the cultivation of berries is of actual benefit to the large fruits. A fair yield of strawberries will bring $200 to $300 an acre, according to market conditions. Raspberries return 30 to 50 per cent less.

Small fruit requires a rich, well drained soil. A light, deep loam is best, and an abundance of well rotted barnyard fertilizer should be plowed in. Soggy land is not favorable to any kind of fruits, but nevertheless moisture is needed, and unless rain is plentiful it will pay to carry water or convey it by means of hose.

Plant at the proper time in hills or hedges and keep the soil loose with hoe or cultivator. Pinch off all blossoms the first season. Mulch with straw and manure in the fall. Strawberries are hardy and prolific, but skilled attention will pay in extent and quality of production. With a view to successful marketing both early and late varieties should be cultivated.

Raspberries are next in importance. There is not so much tedious work connected with growing raspberries as strawberries, and the profits are not quite so large. Set the plants in the spring in rows six feet apart and three feet apart in the rows. This gives plenty of room for cultivating, which must be done thoroughly throughout the growing season. Some experts do not stake raspberries, as is the custom with most growers. When the tips are about two feet high they are pinched back. This causes laterals to be sent out along the stems. In the spring at trimming time these laterals are cut back so as to leave about six inches, and they hold up all the berries they can properly mature.

The red varieties do not need the summer pruning, but are pruned back to about eighteen inches in the spring.

Currants and gooseberries require almost the same treatment and can be considered together. One or two year old plants are best and should be set in rows four feet apart each way so that they may be cultivated both ways. This method insures thorough and easy cultivation. They should be cultivated frequently so as to have a good soil mulch during the growing season. It is best to grow the plants in bush form and trim out very little, only the surplus and deadwood.

It is very important to kill all currant worms with some poisonous spray as soon as they appear. If this is neglected the bushes will soon be destroyed.

When a producer has established a reputation for having a good quality of fruit and giving full measure there will be no difficulty in securing customers. If the product exceeds the demand of private patrons it is always possible to ship to stores or commission houses. Bear in mind, however, that the selling end of the business is important and try to arrange in advance for private customers or retail merchants to take the whole output.

Convenient Chicken Roost.

Select two four inch pieces six feet long. Lay them parallel and nail five crosspieces, three feet long and three inches wide, to these. The legs may be made of 2 by 4 stuff the desired length. By means of long spikes secure them to the parallel pieces. Place this in roosting quarters for chickens and they will soon be perching upon it at night.—Iowa Homestead.

hind the forelegs. Tie another around the body in front of udder, then make a crupper.

Tie another around each fore leg and fasten at top, then a rope around neck. Now sew two gunny sacks together and slip them under these ropes. Take a darning needle and twine and fasten on sides and top.

When the sacks are worn out cut the fastenings and slip two more under. A good blanket will last no longer than the cheap one described.—Farm and Fireside.

WITH THE HONEY MAKERS.

By no means store comb honey in the cellar, as it is sure to sweat and become moldy. Better put it in the attic, as the heat can in no wise harm it, provided, of course, that it isn't hot enough to melt it.

The best and most profitable way for the average beekeeper to dispose of unfinished sections is to extract all that will not sell as second grade for as much as extracted honey will bring and use them for bait sections next year.

In preparing the hives for the late flow proceed in precisely the same manner as for the early flow, using the same supers as formerly, only, of course, putting in new section boxes with foundation for comb honey to take the places of the completed sections taken from them.

The extracted honey when stored in cans or barrels can be placed in cellars or other convenient repositories and unless bottled early will in all probability granulate as soon as the nights become cold, but this granulation in no sense hurts it, and the heating required to liquefy it for bottling in a large measure prevents further granulation.—Farm Journal.

HAMS OF FINE FLAVOR

Directions For Curing and Slicing According to a Famous Recipe.

After the hogs have been killed the meat thoroughly cooled the surface is sprinkled with fine salt until the meat is white, says the Magazine in describing a good for curing hams. About three pounds of saltpeter are used in 100 pounds of hams. Fine salt rubbed over the entire surface the hams are packed in barrels deeper than three feet.

In ordinary weather they should remain thus for several days, three. Then break the bulk in salt with fine salt and again. Each ham should remain in it at least one day for each pound weight. The hams are then in and gradually smoked for forty days with hickory or oak bark.

When the smoking is complete should be re-peppered and packed in canvas bags to guard against spoilage with age, and are considered perfect.

able Evening Dresses"

AN UNADULTERATED THANKSGIVING DINNER

MR. SLYVERS presented himself at the Kranke home at half past 1 o'clock in the afternoon of Thanksgiving day so hungry that while he sat in the front room and talked blithely to his esteemed host he felt it would be only by the most heroic self restraint that he would refrain from leaping at the bright gilded cage that swung in the window and swallowing the canary bird, feathers and all, without salt or pepper.

This savage attitude of Mr. Slyvers was due to the fact that he had gone into rigorous training for the turkey barbecue at Mr. Kranke's.

"You come from out of doors," observed Mr. Kranke, "probably rode on the street cars—great carriers of disease, street cars. But never mind. Sit here for awhile. The atmosphere is well filled with formic aldehyde, which I am vaporizing over the lamp, and any disease germs you may happen to have about you will be destroyed."

Mrs. Kranke and her daughter glided in softly and shook hands with Mr. Slyvers in the same enthusiastic manner in which they might be expected to pick up a deceased catfish by the tail.

"Don't be afraid to eat heartily," said Mr. Kranke genially. "You'll not get typhoid fever by eating these oysters, as I know you fear, although you were too well bred to say so. These oysters are not taken from ocean water filled with germs from the cities. In fact, they are not oysters at all. They are made from oyster plants raised on my father's farm down in the country."

Next came the soup. No deadly hint of ptomaine poisoning lurked in that

"I ALSO FIND ORTHOXYDROXY BENZOIC ACID HAS BEEN PUT ON THIS TURKEY."

soup. Mr. Kranke said so himself. It had been strained five times through a filter.

"What kind of soup do you think it is?" asked Mr. Kranke, smiling at his guest.

"Baled hay" were the words on the tip of Mr. Slyvers' tongue, but he checked them and said, "Why, mulliga-

THE HARVEST HOME.

An Old English Festival Akin to Thanksgiving—Bringing Home the Corn.

Thanksgiving day has an easily traceable connection with other and older institutions, and the original part of it is its independent source on these shores. Among a primitive people, which depended chiefly on its harvests for its means of life, it was almost sure to arise, and with that condition something of the sort almost always has risen.

Hence our Thanksgiving day is an independent thing, and yet it has relations. Its history is so short that it can be traced much more easily than is usual in such cases. Days of thanksgiving were appointed in the early years at various times and for various reasons. An abundant harvest was the most common one. A thanksgiving then came to be appointed regularly each autumn, and the custom gradually extended and became more and more firmly established.

All over the world, and in all times, it has been found that men to whom a fruitful harvest was the greatest blessing of the year have been inclined to express their gratitude to the giver of it in some especial manner. When the character of the people was not so austere as in old England, it did not take on so serious a form, and sometimes lapse of years probably caused the deeply religious element in its origin to be forgotten altogether, while the feast and the frolic were all that occupied the minds of the harvesters. Perhaps many may have had some pleasant memories of the Harvest Home of old England, and whether they did or not, it may be appropriately recalled now.

There were many names for this simple bit of rejoicing. Harvest Home was the most common and best recognized. Among the others were Feast of Ingathering, Harvest Supper, Mell Supper, Kern Supper, and Churn Supper. Not one of them is so pretty and full of meaning as Thanksgiving.

Harvest Home was a most joyful occasion and the result of a natural outpouring of gladness from grateful hearts. In its primitive form it marked the end of the harvest, and the bringing home in triumph of the last load of grain was a part of its formal celebration. In England the cart in which the load was brought was called a hock cart, and it was surmounted by a figure made of a sheaf of corn gayly dressed and adorned. Some have thought that this particular custom dated back to heathen times, and that the figure represented Ceres. A piper and a laborer went in front, and the cart was surrounded by the laughing and cheering reapers and children.

Somewhere on the road at times a neighbor with a taste for ancient practical jokes would lie in wait to throw pails of water on the cart as it passed. This was a quite legitimate recreation, and those on or about the cart had to look out for the dryness of their own clothes and skins. When the last load was finally housed, the farmer would give a great supper to all who had been employed in any way about the harvest, and he himself, with his whole family, joined in it with the laborers, so that the occasion was one of those which united from time to time all classes on an equal footing.

A Song of Thanksgiving.

PARALYSED AND COULD NOT WALK

"Fruit-a-tives" Completely Restored New Brunswick Merchant To Health.

MR. ALVA PHILLIPS

BRISTOL, N. B., JULY 25th. 1911.
"I am unable to say enough in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' as it saved my life and restored me to health, when I had given up all hope and when the doctors had failed to do anything more for me. I had a stroke of Paralysis in March, 1910, and this left me unable to walk or help myself, and the Constipation of the bowels was terrible. Nothing did me any good and I was wretched in every way. Finally, I took 'Fruit-a-tives' for the Constipation, and it not only cured me of that trouble but gradually this fruit medicine toned up the nerves and actually cured the paralysis. Under the use of 'Fruit-a-tives', I grew stronger and stronger until all the palsy and weakness left me. I am now well again and attend my store every day and all day."

Champion Crier.

Town criers docked to Hastings from all parts to join in the competition for the Crying Championship of England. The occasion is a serious one for them, for they prize their reputation for lusty lungs. Mr. W. B. Angliss, of Marlborough, was declared by the judges to have shouted the best, and he is now the champion crier of England in succession to Mr. W. Low, from Horsham, who won the championship last year.

"F. E.'s" Blunder.

F. E. Spith, the prominent young Tory politician in England, recently got off a splendid "blunder" by referring to the Preamble Act and its famous Preamble as "twins, the younger of which has not been born."

Harold Spith, "F. E.'s" brother, strolled into the House a moment later, whereupon a voice from the Irish members murmured, "Here comes the other twin!"

soup. Mr. Kranke said so himself. It had been strained five times through a filter.

"What kind of soup do you think it is?" asked Mr. Kranke, smiling at his guest.

"Baled hay" were the words on the tip of Mr. Slyvers' tongue, but he checked them and said, "Why, mulligatawny, isn't it?"

Mr. Kranke frowned as if to indicate that if he ever knew of a mulligatawny running around in his kitchen he would catch it in a steel trap and cut its tail off close up behind its ears.

"No," he replied; "this soup is made of four herbs that grow down on our farm."

The maid then reappeared, bearing a great brown juicy turkey on an immense platter. Mr. Slyvers wanted to throw both arms around the turkey and lay his head on its shoulder and weep for sheer joy, but he contained himself with an effort and waited for Mr. Kranke to carve.

But instead of taking up the carving knife Mr. Kranke waited until the maid came in with a little tray on which were three or four test tubes. Mr. Slyvers looked at the test tubes, and then his eyes rested fondly and regretfully on the turkey as he whispered softly, "Goodby, Mr. Turkey."

"The butcher sent us this turkey yesterday," said Mr. Kranke, "and, following my usual custom, I took small bits of it and put them in these various solutions for investigation."

"Ha," said Mr. Kranke as he examined the first tube, "as I suspected, Mr. Slyvers, can you believe me when I say I also find orthohydroxy benzoic acid has been put on this turkey?"

"Well," said Mr. Slyvers nervously, "that's all right. I—that is to say, you know, I like orthohydroxy acid. Yes, at home we used to have it on the table all the time. Of course some people like chutney sauce best, but I"—

"Why, Mr. Slyvers," said Mr. Kranke, "you don't understand. I could not permit a guest at my table to eat poison. Take the turkey away, Maggie, at once."

As the turkey went out the door Mrs. Kranke said she was sorry she could offer her guest nothing to drink, because the test she had made that morning showed a large percentage of chicory in the coffee and that she had sent the milk into exile because it was suspected of harboring formaldehyde in its clothes.

It was late in the afternoon, and the white garbed student in the bacteriological laboratory at the medical college was getting ready to lock up and go home when Mr. Slyvers in a highly demoralized condition burst in.

"Hey, barshen'er!" shouted Mr. Slyvers. "Make me a germ cocktail an' put a bashillus in it!"—Chicago Tribune.

Thanksgiving Morning.

Thursday morning the household ought to sleep and rest a little longer than usual—it helps on the general feeling of holiday. The breakfast ought to be festive in some degree, though in no way rival the dinner. The chicken can be fried while the potatoes bake, and if raised biscuit were not started last night, a johnnycake is next best, and this is just the thing.

The Bliss of Ignorance.

I watch the farmer's axe and block
The while you little reckon;
My proud and strutting turkey-cock,
You'll get it in the neck.

A turkey stood in a cranberry swamp,
And sang till his throat was sore;
For all day long, he sang the song,
"We shall meet on this beautiful shore."

Unbreakable China.

The most interesting exhibit at the Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Show at the Agricultural Hall, in London, was undoubtedly the china metal-plating demonstration. By means of this new process china can actually be made unbreakable. An alloy of silver and cobalt is plated on to china vessels, giving the china a wearing service equal to the finest plate.

A FUTURE CITY SECOND TO NONE IN WESTERN CANADA.

SWIFT CURRENT

Saskatchewan

Q Tributary country and railroads built up Western Canada's most famous cities.

Q A brief comparison is all that is needed to show why Swift Current is destined to become in the near future a city surpassed by no other in the whole Canadian West.

Q Swift Current has no commercial rival in her tremendous territory which is four times as large as that which made "Regina," and seven times as great as that of Moose Jaw. It has in fact more territory than any other city in Western Canada.

Q Moose Jaw's record was made in a territory many times smaller than that which builds up Swift Current. What must Swift Current's growth be with a rich territory seven times greater than Moose Jaw has?

Q Within two years Swift Current will be a freight and passenger divisional point on four railroads with no less than thirteen branches running into Swift Current. Her railway situation is unequalled in Western Canada.

Q Swift Current's population doubled in 1912. By the end of 1913 it is conservatively estimated it will be at least 10,000.

Q Swift Current is the finest investment opportunity in the West. And the best buy in Swift Current is...

Mount Pleasant

Q Swift Current's finest homes adjoin it. It is already in demand for high-class residential building purposes. The city is subdivided 2½ miles farther out than Mount Pleasant. Lots 2 miles farther out are selling for as high as $200 per lot.

It is generally understood in government circles that Premier Borden intends to get rid of some of the weak brethren in his cabinet at the earliest opportunity, and to bring in at least four new ministers with a view to strengthening the ministry, especially in regard to debating talent in the commons and in platform oratory for the stump, in which the cabinet is now admittedly weak. The ministers slated for retirement are: Hon. Bruno Nantel, minister of inland revenue; Hon. Louis Coderre, secretary of state and minister of mines; and Hon. T. W. Crothers, minister of labor.

The Historical Lecture.

When Prof. Coleman first lectured before the Historical Society in January, 1912, he delivered one of the best lectures ever heard in Historical Hall. Many of the people of Napanee at that time expressed a desire to hear him again. His lecture next Friday night (October 24th) should be of equal if not greater interest. Prof. Coleman has recently accepted the position as Dean of the Faculty of Education at Queen's University, which position was left vacant by the death of Dean Ellis. He is regarded as one of Canada's able men and everyone who can possibly do so should hear him.

Presentation.

In the Humboldt Journal of October 9th, appears the following, which will be of interest to many in Napanee:

"The regular meeting of the town council was held on Monday evening. His Worship the Mayor in the chair, and all the members present. Before the business of the meeting was taken up, a very pleasant affair took place, when Mayor Andreassen arose and in a short speech referred to the fact that one of the board had recently joined the ranks of the benedictines; Coun. Telfer, he said, had always been one of the popular members of council, and he was sure all would join with him in extending hearty congratulations to both Mr. and Mrs. Telfer. It was then that a real surprise was sprung on Coun. Telfer, when a most beautiful and costly cabinet of silver was presented to him and Mrs. Telfer, from the Mayor and Councillors and corporation officials. In replying Coun. Telfer said that he was taken so completely by surprise that he could hardly find words to express himself, but on behalf of himself and Mrs. Telfer he thanked the council and officials for the beautiful present, and which they would always prize as one of their dearest possessions. At the close of the meeting the members and the officials were the guests of Coun. Telfer at the King George Cafe."
